

PENTAGON TO GET SOME C.I.A. DUTIES

Plan to Give Kennedy Admin
to Control War Control

THE JAMES EASTON

WASHINGTON, April 28.—The Defense Dept. is believed to have been asked to accept the responsibility of the defense of conventional warfare and the defense of the nation's nuclear forces and the defense of the nation's nuclear forces.

According to those sources, some of the operational functions of the Central Intelligence Agency, such as the planning of operations, the defense of the nation's nuclear forces, and the defense of the nation's nuclear forces, will be transferred to the Department of Defense.

Consequently, it is understood that the Defense Department will also become responsible for the defense of the nation's nuclear forces, and the defense of the nation's nuclear forces.

President's View Cited

These moves, a high official said, were made after President Kennedy had been told that all forms of warfare from atomic attack through subversive warfare and civil defense would be transferred to the Pentagon.

Three factors have led to the move toward placing more authority in the professional armed services.

First, the realization of what must be regarded as a considerable, far-reaching, warfare, subversive and civil defense, and the necessity of the nation, and therefore should be placed in the hands of the professional.

Second, the disappointing performance of the Central Intelligence Agency, which made the mistake of the Cuban attack on Cuba last week, the U.S. government has been asked to accept the responsibility of the defense of the nation's nuclear forces, and the defense of the nation's nuclear forces.

Third, the realization of what must be regarded as a considerable, far-reaching, warfare, subversive and civil defense, and the necessity of the nation, and therefore should be placed in the hands of the professional.

Confidence Is Shaken

There is no doubt that the C.I.A. has been shaken by the fact that the Cuban military would attack against President Kennedy's Government, and the fact that the Cuban military would attack against President Kennedy's Government, and the fact that the Cuban military would attack against President Kennedy's Government.

These reports apparently go back to the fact that C.I.A. agents have recently been in touch with the anti-Communist groups in Algeria, and that C.I.A. officials gave a briefing to the Senate in Washington on the subject of the anti-Communist groups in Algeria, and that C.I.A. officials gave a briefing to the Senate in Washington on the subject of the anti-Communist groups in Algeria.

All this has increased the confidence in the White House that the C.I.A. has gone beyond the bounds of its objective intelligence-gathering agency and has become the advocate of men and policies that have embarrassed the Administration.

President Tells Leaders

The accounts for the fact that the President has told his leaders on Capitol Hill not only that he intends to transfer some of the Central Intelligence Agency's operational functions to the Department of Defense but also that he intends to change the direction of the C.I.A. itself.

In fact, it is widely rumored here that while Allen W. Dulles, the present director of the C.I.A., is sitting on the board of inquiry into that agency's activities in the Cuban military operation, he has already told the President that his resignation is available at any time.

Mr. Dulles, who has been engaged in intelligence operations for the United States ever since World War I, has been head of the C.I.A. since early 1953, ordered to resign after the controversy over the shooting down of a U.S. plane in Cuba. At least one high official said the President has been told that Mr. Dulles has been engaged in intelligence operations for the United States ever since World War I, has been head of the C.I.A. since early 1953, ordered to resign after the controversy over the shooting down of a U.S. plane in Cuba.
